Hearing loss: Are you affected?

One in every 10 people under the age of 65 has difficulty hearing the full range of sounds. Hearing is the key to life, to our relationships with other human beings and to social activities. In most cases hearing loss develops over a long period of time and has many different causes. People affected by hearing loss often find it difficult to recognize it.

Do any of these situations sound familiar?

- I sometimes feel that people are not speaking clearly (mumbling).
- When people address me from behind or from a few feet away, I have difficulty understanding them.
- I have difficulty understanding people in meetings or group discussions.
- I sometimes fail to hear the doorbell or telephone.
- In situations with a high noise level, e.g. in restaurants, on the train, or at parties, I have difficulty understanding other people.
- I find it hard to hear birds singing, footsteps, running water, and other soft everyday sounds.
- Other people have told me that I don't hear well.

If any of these situations are familiar to you, you should get your hearing tested by our certified Audiologists and Hearing Aid Practitioners. These highly trained professionals will take the time to explain your hearing test results and provide you with a personal demonstration of the latest hearing aid technology available. Don't wait too long — because your brain forgets the process of hearing. Correcting your hearing loss can result in a significant improvement in your quality of life.
